

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT

Dunwoody's Business Department positions students to move into managerial and other leadership positions or start their own businesses in a variety of technical industries. Students take courses in areas such as leadership, accounting, marketing, strategic planning, and leading organization change.

All courses are offered as distance learning courses and taught by faculty members who have extensive industry experience and the appropriate degrees and certifications in their field of expertise. Students learn how to manage business relationships; develop, produce, and market products and services; navigate industry and government regulations; and tackle complex projects. Students also enhance their business soft skills such as communication and leadership. The Department offers a bachelor's completion degree in Business Management & Leadership.
